2019 Data Science Boot Camp Logistics

Thank you for registering for the 2019 Data Science Boot Camp, August 12-16, 2019 at Rice University. Please read the information below carefully, as it contains important information about the upcoming course.

Materials

All classroom materials will be shared via box.com. Hard copies will NOT be printed for the course. Please look for an invitation from box.com a few days before the class starts to join the folder. The materials will generally be in PDF format. You can download and save each pdf to your own laptop and use Adobe Acrobat Reader for commenting or note taking digitally. Access to the box folder will be available for one month after the course ends, or until September 16, 2019. After this date you will no longer have access to the student materials, so please download any information from the box folder you would like to keep for your reference prior to this date.

Access to Systems at Rice

As you agreed when you registered, please remember you are required to bring a laptop for the hands-on exercises. You will need to have a recent version of Firefox or Chrome installed on your machine.

Classroom and Lab Instruction

Please refer to the "Anaconda installation instructions" included in the Student Instructions PDF attachment sent to you via email.
